

#PeopleMakePetrofac

Tetiana Boiko

I am a Principal Structural Engineer at Petrofac. It is really great to see the results of your work when you feel that part of your work, part of your mind, part of your soul in that structure. I came to the UK having nothing due to the war, but I was pretty sure that I'm a good engineer and I would have a job according to my profession.

One of the memorable moments was at a diversity and inclusion meeting when I understood that being different is not a bad thing. To have a different accent, to have a different mentality, and to have different educational traditions. People do make Petrofac. Petrofac is about supporting people.
